Thirty years ago Bethel's history found a home on Broad Street

By ALISON ALOISIO

During the 30 years it has served as the centerpiece of the Bethel Historical Society, the Moses Mason House has welcomed a broad spectrum of visitors.

There have been jeepers and golfers coming across the common from the Bethel Inn. There have been school children from Crescent Park and other schools. There were even some sheep that showed up one winter night to warm themselves by the old fireplace.

Since the house began serving as the headquarters for the Bethel Historical Society in 1974, about 3,000 people a year have come through its doors for a tour. That's a total of nearly 100,000 — enough to fill a football stadium or two.

Judy Haskell is a longtime guide at the house, which was built in 1813 by Dr. Moses Mason, a prominent citizen of Bethel. She remembers the home from before BHS took it over and restored it, in the Marius Peladeau of the Maine League of Historical Societies and Museums, saw the potential in the Federal Period house.

"I believe the Moses Mason House can become the focal point for a rebirth of historical interest in the entire northwestern corner of our state," he was quoted as saying in the Maine History News.

Particularly interesting features of the home were the hand-painted murals in the hallways, which were still in excellent condition.

Such murals were imitations of expensive scenic wallpaper imported from Europe, which rural New Englanders could not afford, according to the History News.

Change is waiting in the wings for Airport Authority

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Bethel Board of Selectmen has decided it's time for some changes at the Bethel Airport Authority, and perhaps even time to consider changes in the way the facility itself is supported.

The consensus, reached at this week's selectmen's meeting, stems in part from frustration over ongoing disputes involving the authority.

The authority has had "lousy press recently," Mike Murphy told the selectmen. "This internal squabbling between certain individuals and the board is making bad news in aviation circles. It travels fast, the bad news."

Selectman Stan Howe said he was troubled by the acrimony, and felt the airport should be run more like a business.'

"Its been run too much on the side of the pilots," he

Dutch Dresser, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said there was consensus on the board that changes were needed, a process that will begin with a reformulation of ordinances related to the Airport Authority.

The selectmen Monday considered several proposals ("discussion points") for possible changes, the most significant being to reduce the size of the authority, from its current seven members to three.

Also mentioned in passing, but not formally proposed, was the possibility of funding part of the airport's future operation from property tax revenues.

Howe predicted strong resistance to such a move.

He noted that when the Airport Authority was set up in the early 1980s, it passed the Board of Selectmen and Town

The Bethel Library, next door to the Robinson House, has prospered through the same era as the Historical Society.

During most of that time — 28 years — John Head has served as the library's treasurer. He retired last month, turning responsibilities over to Mike Drapeau.

Over the past three decades, the library's endowment funds have grown from four to two dozen. Most of them were established by

THE SKY IS NOT FALLING

To the Editor:

Doom and gloom! Gloom and doom! It's Chicken Little's, "The sky is falling." It will be the end of the world, scream the headlines and TV ads, if Proposition 1 (the tax cap) passes. Well I say

The naysayers said the same things about Prop. 13 in California and it didn't happen. They also said the same things about Prop 2½ in Massachusetts and it didn't happen. And it won't happen here in Maine. What then is the problem?

It's all about spending money. If money is available for Augusta to spend they will spend it. They even spend money before they have it. If you don't believe it look at past history. For over 30 years the liberal spenders have been in control and their spending has outpaced actual revenues, inflation, the consumer price index and population growth. It must stop, and Proposition 1 is the way to do it.

There is enough money now to fund all the necessary programs: education, fire, police, and the safety net. What we need on both the state and local level is belt tightening. Anyone in authority should spend public money just like it is their own, without using a credit card. Every program needs to be sun-setted and only reinstated when it is absolutely necessary, is being done in the most efficient way, isn't being duplicated anywhere else, and is in sync with the other states in New England. Every government administrator needs to justify with real data, his or her position.

It's about time the people of Maine who pay all the taxes (the revenue politicians love to spend) take back control. Vote "yes" for the tax cap and force the Legislature to justify every program already on the books before they fund it. Don't let the scare tactics of the special interest groups influence your vote

STATE GOVERNMENT IS STILL US

My tax bill came last week. I find that $1,262 (57 percent) will go to local schools, 35 percent will go toward running the town and 6 percent will go to the county.

If question one (tax cap) passes, I just don't see how the schools or the town can function. Am I missing something? Is our state government in a position to make up the difference? Isn't state government still us?

CELINA'S GARDEN DEDICATION

To the Editor:

Everyone is invited to the dedication of Celina's Garden at Crescent Park School on Thursday, Oct. 7 at 1:30 p.m., rain or shine. For those who cannot make the event, there will also be å small gathering on Saturday, Oct. 23, at 2 p.m.

The garden was planned and created by family and friends of Celina Jodrey, whom we lost so tragically last April. Celina was well known for her love of children, gardening and reading; a granite reading bench was specially made to invite all to sit and read and remember in the hope that her memory stays ålive forever.

We would like to thank D.A. Wilson and Richard Douglass for donating materials to the garden.

Please join us and the whole student body of CPS for this dedication. We hope to see you all there.

ATV GROUP TO MEET

To the Editor:

The Bethel Recreational Riders ATV Club will be holding its first public meeting on Oct. 16 at 113 Flat Road.

With the change in ATV laws regarding landowner permission late this summer the state is encouraging ATV owners to be affiliated with a club and establish a maintained trail system.

Our club is interested in establishing a trail system through the Bethel area in the hope that it will eventually lead to an interconnecting system out of the area. The club encourages interested persons/families to join. For more information, contact me at 836-2028.

IT'S A RIGHT TO DISPLAY SIGNS

To the Editor:

I was told this evening about an incident that others should know about.

An older, visually impaired lady had a Kerry sign on her lawn. Someone took the sign down, tore it and threw it in the ditch.

It makes no difference which candidate it is, let's respect each other's right to display signs of our choosing. Let's be civil to one another in this hotly contested presidential race and above you. all let's respect personal property.

TO THE FOLKS OF GREENWOOD

To the Editor:

On Oct. 14 at 7 p.m. there is a very important Town Meeting at the Greenwood Town Hall. It is to see if I will be recalled as your selectman. This is not a case of what I did wrong against the town, but for asking tough questions to a past selectperson and the two sitting selectmen. When we as selectmen make policy it must be for the good of the whole town. We cannot make policy behind closed doors.

First, the salt shed was a mess that cost you a lot of money. I got that squared away, but it still is not a $260,000 shed. That still stays on my mind.

Second, the dam that holds back three of our lakes is now safe. The other two selectmen wanted to wait on the dam and do nothing. I was called to the dam by the road foreman and told that Selectman Wayne Hakala had told the Town Crew to open the dam for the weekend due to a rain forecast, and it now could not be closed, and the dam was in peril.

1) It is against the law for a selectman to tell the road crew what to do. It has to go through the town manager.

2) It did not rain that weekend.

3) If the town crew opened the gate as ordered by Hakala, the lakes would have not come back all summer.

When I told the other two selectmen we had to act there was a "no" for a response. I got the cofferdam fixed at a savings of $15,000 with help from the Fire Department, Road Crew, Cubby Swan, 10 Engineer CDBG grant people, AVCOG, Andre Construction, and Bernier Concrete. It is done. It took many, many hours to get this done for which I did not ask to be paid.

Let me speak about my depleting the office salary wage account. I feel the reason is that the past town manager stayed for seven weeks after the new town manager came in. At $700 a week that brought the total to $4,900 dollars that emptied the account. The former town manager was only to stay for two weeks. I did ask the new Town Manager if she could take over after two weeks and she said yes. The other two selectmen told the former town manager that she could stay until the first of the year if she wanted to.

No one was going to training, or grant writing but me in the town office. I felt that we as a board lacked up-to-date training and had no idea what was going on and that I had to get this training. I have worked to get hundreds of junk cars hauled off from Greenwood and Woodstock. I worked to get the crosswalks painted and signs put up in the village. I have worked to get the agreement with Woodstock fair to Greenwood. At first this did make for heated talks, but as of now I feel I have a good working relationship with Woodstock selectmen.

I would like to be able to finish my term, as I have a few more things I feel would be good for the people of Greenwood. One is to get a $400,000 grant for the elderly and people who do not have what I have. This $400,000 would be for Greenwood, Woodstock, and maybe West Paris. Second, to get a business on the Gordon property. There is a grant available to help us do this. I am asking for your help. Please come to the meeting and vote for me to continue working for you and the town.

I wish to thank the people of Greenwood who have supported me.

TIM CARTER

To the Editor:

Tim Carter grew up and worked in a family that has been in the business of agriculture for many generations. After twenty-five years of being the owner/operator of Carter Farm, he Prest had joined the sales staff worked for seven years as the Northeast Area Director of the USDA. He is a strong advocate for fair tax reform for small businesses and sustainable development for the community. The World Commission on the Environment and Development calls sustainability, "development Dustin Allan Howe, Amos that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs." It means keeping our children's future in mind as we conduct businesses that affect our natural resources. Carter was a participant in Gov. Baldacci's Blaine House Conference where people from all over the state convened to discuss the advantages in pursuing a "Creative and Sustainable Economy" for their communities.

I hope you'll support Tim Carter, Kerry/Edwards, Bryant and Michaud; among their strengths For Celina's Garden dedication is the initiative they have taken to create jobs. And please keep an eye out for the next follow-up conference on "Creative Economy" right here in Bethel.

BRUCE BRYANT

To the Editor:

Two pieces of legislation, particularly dear to my heart, were enacted into law last term and Sen. Bruce Bryant was a primary force in getting them passed.

LD 1318 is now Public Law 670. It sets rates of compensation for harvesting and hauling timber. Of course, it's more complex than that. There's a petition process and a three-person panel to judge and act on the petition. It gives workers some degree of bargaining power where uated from recruit training at landowners own thousands of acres of timberland. Without this law, the powerful landowner Parris Island, S.C. could just about call the shots. A group of us tried to get something like this done when I was a legislator. We failed.

LD1962 is now Resolve 2003. It's a committee effort chaired by Bryant and worked on by the committee he chairs, Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry. This resolve goes a long way in eliminating liquidation harvesting of forestland. I worked hard on this issue when I was a legislator. With a coalition of like-minded representatives and senators, we wanted to get such a bill passed. We thought of liquidation harvesting as merciless clear cutting. We hit a brick wall. Bryant got it done.

It is not easy to get legislation passed. You have to work to get a majority of votes in both the House and Senate. The governor must be convinced the enacted legislation is workable in "the real world."

These two laws advance the rights of Maine workers and our future, the Maine environment. Well done, Senator Bryant, I'll do what I can to make sure you continue to serve us, and thank

JOHN KERRY

To the Editor:

President Bush's recent visit to Maine reminded me of Pinocchio. Does he tell those tall tales because he can't help it, or because he thinks Mainers are too dim to check the facts?

Mr. Bush lied about the WMDs. Now he says the war in Iraq helps fight terrorism, and that makes his nose grow. Osama Bin Laden is on the Afghan border, but most of our troops aren't. Bush says he's made our nation more secure, but he's done almost nothing to protect our ports, chemical factories, and nuke plants from terrorists. And now he's telling Mainers that John Kerry will raise your taxes. That's a lie unless you're in the top tax bracket, which most of us aren't. We have the largest deficit in history because George Bush gave hundreds of billions in tax cuts to millionaires who don't need it.

I'm a Republican, but no more lies for me. John Kerry may not be the warmest guy in the world, but at least his nose isn't as long as his arm.

No special Town Meeting

WOODSTOCK — Selectmen Tuesday decided against holding a special Town Meeting this month. They will instead wait and place two articles on the annual Town Meeting warrant in March. They said the articles are too important to be decided by a small number of voters. One article asks voters to ratify their vote from the last annual Town Meeting to discontinue a section of the Ricker Road and turn it over to abutting landowner Warren Hillquist. Voters approved the article, which also said the town would take the road back if requested by Hillquist or his heirs. But selectmen said many voters believed at the time that the town would not have to take it back, and a second vote would clarify the issue. The second article proposes a property tax break for Tim and Francis Buck for a restaurant they plan next to the Mollyockett Motel on Route 26. The selectmen said it would set a precedent and they do not support it.

5K run/walk supports Girls on Run

BETHEL — The first annual Community and Family 5K run/walk, to benefit the Western Maine Girls on the Run program, will take place Nov. 13. The run will follow a very flat route through the village of Bethel. Girls on the Run is a nine-week program for girls ages 8 to 12 that utilizes selfesteem enhancing workouts in training for the 5K. This fall, similar programs were started in Norway and Rumford. For an entrance form e-mail goldberg@megalink.net.

Selectmen oppose tax cap

HANOVER — Selectmen last week unanimously voiced their opposition to the Palesky tax-cap referendum. The board estimated if the proposal passed. Hanover would lose about $72,000, from its budget. That would be the equivalent of 22 percent of its current budget of $330,000. Selectmen also added an article to the warrant for the annual Town Meeting, scheduled for Oct. 26, to allow the presentation of information, as well as comments and questions, on the Information about the club's other activities such as the annual Flying Moose Nordic ski race, Club photos and an Activities Calendar are being published on the site. Proceeds of the 24th annual Ski Sale will benefit area youth ski programs by providing skis, boots, and poles for elementary school students, funding middle and high school Nordic programs, and making grants to area skiers on state, regional, or national cross-country teams. The purpose of the Bethel Outing Club is to promote Nordic skiing and family-oriented outings with particular emphasis on youth ski programs. PERC program offered

BETHEL - A program to help parents understand and communicate with their adolescents begins Oct. 13. Parent Effectiveness in Resolving Conflict (PERC) is part of a statewide series run by the Julie Foundation and is a stepby-step approach to help parents understand the nature of adolescents, to communicate more effectively, to be comfortable with drugs and issues related to sexuality, and to take a positive look at tools that have proven to work. Wayne DuPlessis, a local psychotherapist who specializes in adolescents and who has been with the PERC program since its founding in 1995, will facilitate the course. The six-week course is on Tuesday nights from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 13. The $15 registration fee includes reference books. A scholarship program is also available. To register, call 824-chased, a painstaking, twoyear restoration followed. Consultants from the Smithsonian Institute and Sturbridge Village provided advice during the process.

The wood floors were sanded to bring back their original appearance, and volunteers did research to uncover such details as the original colors of the walls.

All the hard work paid off in 1972, when the home was designated a national historic

In 1974, the deed was awarded to BHS, and Stan Howe was hired as curator.

But the house that would serve as a museum still had to be furnished. Rosalind Chapman, one of the original BHS trustees, remembers the call went out for people to donate items to fill the home.

"We decided we had to only take things pertinent to the house," she said. "Otherwise, we would have been swamped."

As it was, more than 70 people donated furnishings some of them original to the house. Items included a Boston rocker, Hitchcock chairs, pewter, bed linen and

The response to the request for donations became a source of local pride, then-president Margaret Joy Tibbetts wrote in an account of the effort in the History News.

The pieces, she said, helped create an accurate picture of the times during which the Mason family lived.

"Dr. and Mrs. Mason were people with strong family traditions. They were also, like their friends and neighbors, citizens of a frontier community often preoccupied with such problems as garden pests or making sure that they had enough firewood. The House reflects both their position as local dignitaries and the simplicity of life in Maine's interior 150 years ago," she wrote.

A history hub After the building was dedicated on July 10, 1974, the society and its membership grew and prospered. "It focused everything, and gave us a presence, right there on the common" said Howe, "Every time we sent out a newsletter, more and more people would join."

Research and publishing were the focus of early activities at the house.

"At the time, we were publishing more than the Maine Historical Society," said Randy Bennett, the current curator of collections. "We were known as 'the history factory."

Chapman was a volunteer researcher. She also wrote articles on streets, roads and property in the area.

As the collection grew, "the genealogists started to arrive," said Bennett, to do research. "We started collecting town histories (from area towns) for the families." The focus became more regional.

As time passed, the historians and volunteers also began putting together exhibits and activities.

In 1975, for instance, BHS held "Heritage Day," featuring craft displays and demonstrations, slides and tours. A display entitled "The Family Farm' also opened that day, in the lobby of the Bethel Savings Bank.

While other activities multiplied, the tours continued at the Moses Mason House.

Haskell has been guiding since 1975. Even in the early days, "we had people here morning and afternoon," she said. "And we had lots of kids."

The level of interest among youngsters, then and now, could vary widely.

One 8-year-old who had read the whole "Little House on the Prairie" book series told Haskell, "'I'm so glad to be here." The child toured the house with great respect and interest.

Other, more rambunctious, youngsters have to be watched closely, she said.

One group of visitors came annually, during the "Living Nativity.'

The Christmas-season event on the common features local residents and animals who re-enact the Nativity scene. For many years, the people changed into their costumes in the MMH barn.

While they dressed, the sheep from the cast warmed themselves next to the huge fireplace.

"It was neat to have animals back in the barn," said Ben-

MMH has also been visited over the years by most of Maine's prominent historians, he said.

The late Sen. Edmund S. Muskie also visited. He took part in the 1977 dedication ceremonies for the Bethel Historic District.

Then there was the day Bennett ran into then-NBC television correspondent Douglas Kiker in the hallway.

Kiker was in town to interview Howe about Maine's 19th-century practice of naming towns after foreign counand to film the tries that lists many of them.

Still growing

Today, the offices of the 1,200-member society are next door to the Mason House, in the larger Robinson House. Acquired in 1999, the house provides more space for exhibits, offices and other activities. Future plans call for construction of a barn behind it to house a new research library, a climate-controlled storage room and a new classroom.

Bennett, Howe and the members/volunteers are glad they are no longer cramped in the tiny upstairs of MMH. But the home's tours and its popularity continue. We'll never forget the Moses Mason House," said Howe. "It's our real gem."

The Way I See It

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published by special arrangement with the Advertising Department

When my children were young their father and I imposed certain rules and restrictions on them and the children were expected to abide by them or face the consequences if they didn't.

We were not strict parents by any means, but there were certain expectations of behavior that were clearly stated to the youngsters starting very early in their lives. Naturally, they pushed the boundaries as all children do and they were punished accordingly.

All the books on child rearing emphasize that children, not only need, but want clearly defined rules. I had my doubts that my children actually wanted clearly defined rules, but they had to live with them anyway.

Now that they are adults with children of their own I am delighted to see that they have carried the same rules they were raised with and have imposed them on their own little ones.

I chuckle to myself when I think of all the times I heard, "When I have kids of my own I'll never make them do that!" Now I observe just how many times they make them do exactly that. I guess that's some confirmation that as parents their father and I were on the right track.

But, here's the weird part; I have no such compunction to impose most of the same rules on my grandchildren when they are in my home. And don't think that my children haven't noticed that their children get away with things that would have banished them to their rooms in a hurry.

Take television viewing for example; my children were restricted to a certain period of time per day that they were allowed to watch their favorite shows. And this was only permitted after homework and chores were done. They often whined about the unfairness, but with the exception of some special circumstances, they were reminded that rules were rules for a reason.

When my grandsons come to visit they immediately take possession of the remote control and plant themselves in front of the T.V. Other than to monitor what they're watching to make sure they're not being exposed to sex and violence, their grandfather and I watch things like "Rug Rats" right along with them.

Something very strange happens when your children have children.

"I can't believe you let them watch that stuff. It is so stupid. You never would have let me watch anything that dumb when I was little!" It's very strange to be admonished by your children for such things.

Snacks are another thing that seems to set my children on edge a bit. I keep one shelf in my cupboard reserved for goodies that I buy for the grandkids. They can usually count on a pretty good supply of snack crackers, fruit chews, cookies and cupcakes. I try to be sensitive to their dental health and avoid most candy except for special occasions.

"I can't believe you let them eat that and they haven't even had supper yet! You never let us eat anything like that until we had cleaned our plates!" I guess I see things a little differently as a grandmother and don't see why they can't just have supper for dessert. When the grandchildren spend the night at my house bedtime seems to be another bone of contention with their parents. The little ones always look like they are having such a good time I just don't have the heart to pull the plug on their fun.

"I can't believe you let the kids stay up so late! You never let us do that and you always gave us a speech on the importance of a good night's sleep. What on earth has gotten into

Being a grandparent, that's what has gotten into me. Something very strange happens when your children have children. The first time you hold that grandbaby in your arms you become soft as a grape. This is your legacy and may very well be the last link that will remember you years down the road.

Many years from now when my great-grandchildren come across a picture of me in an old photo album and ask who that funny old lady is, I want my grandchildren to say, "Oh, that was my grandmother. I wish you could have known her, she was a really cool lady."

But it's not just creating lasting memories of indulging my grandchildren that makes me act the way I do with them. It's because they are so special. They are the culmination of all the hopes and dreams I had for my children. A small part of me and my children will live on through them and into future generations to come.

Spoil my grandchildren; you bet I do. And so do many other grandparents or there wouldn't be any reason for little tee shirts that say "When the going gets tough call 1-800-GRANDMA."

The other day after I had taken my grandsons to the store and let them have their way in the toy department my daughter said, "Someday when I become a grandmother I'm not going to indulge my grandchildren the way you do."

Well, the way I see it, she will indulge her grandchildren the same way because it is a grandparent rule and after all, I did raise her to abide by all

Eleanor LeComte Our most beautiful season is here in all its multicolored glory.

The mornings are nippy cold. Frost covers are now a necessity to protect the tomatoes, which this year are ripening on the vine. The colorful trees around the lake give a mirror image in the dark water. The camps are in use by many folks who love it here in God's own country.

Fishing season has closed for this year but bird season is open for hunting. Isolated shots echo across the lake. Buster Williamson met up with a plump partridge in front of my home. His gun was at home. Lucky bird. Partridge are great on the wing or in the pot. Bird loving presents in many forms.

Lake levels are disgustingly low, as the Androscoggin River flows freely. Boats have become mired in the mud overnight. Lorraine Larson First of all, I want to offer the town's sincerest sympathy to the family of Harry Swan, Jr., who died on Sunday, Sept. 25. He fought a good fight with his cancer, but cancer seems too often to win out in the long run. Harry and Margery were citizens so long in this town that it has not been quite the same since they moved to the South Paris area, but they are still heart related, so to speak, and we all feel a great sense of loss. We pray strength and peace for Margie and the rest of his family.

It doesn't seem possible that the leaves have started to turn and fall has arrived. I don't know about anyone else but I feel as if summer got short-changed this year and was bypassed by some other season whose name I do not know. Seeing what folks are going through in Florida this year I really shouldn't be griping, but we have long enough winters without summer being quite so cool. I do not particularly like 90s, but we hardly got an 80 this year.

I am sure I am not alone in being thankful that the elections are not far off. I don't wish time away, it goes fast enough as it is; but, I am being bombarded, as I am sure a lot of you are, with letters, appeals for help (all predicting dire consequences if you don't respond immediately), innuendoes, and other appeals, such as "would you be a voter registration coordinator for your area" type of thing. My personal opinion is that most people in the Greenwood area are above average in intelligence and abilities and they probably are registered already and. if not, are perfectly capable of doing so on their own. I also figure that most of us have pretty definite opinions as to who we want or don't want, already; but, as I tried to point out to someone, the reason we have secret ballots is so, if We haven't heard that we choose, we can keep our opinions to our selves, and I Township recently, other than am not obligated to tell him the bike treks from a couple of or anyone else who I plan to vote for. Somehow, in this age of information highway, the concept of keeping one's opinions to oneself seems to be a foreign one, I must admit that I have a lot of opinions on a lot of things that I probably too freely share but politics is one pick up their signs once their area I try to steer clear of. I am not too happy with the name calling that has been going on right here in our town, to say nothing of national candidates who do not seem to get the message that people do not like the negative campaigning. Enough already.

I forgot to mention that the people of Praise Assembly of God in Rumford Center are very pleased with the piano that Arnold and Pearl Jordan gave to the church. I was very nice of them.

Debbie Brown took the day off from her shop, Thursday, to take her mother to two doctor's appointments in Portland. Unfortunately, one was in the morning and one in the late afternoon, so she put her mother in a wheelchair and toured the Mall between appointments. I am not sure just who was more exhausted by the end of the day.

I finally had to get off the Internet for a while so we can get this computer clean of whatever it is that is possessing it. I miss having it to send out my news particularly and am not happy having to go to Bethel to turn it in. as I have been spoiled; but, I do not want someone else to get infected with whatever this thing has got because it spoils any enjoyment one has in having a computer. My cousin, Frank, says it sounds as if it has a worm, which is hard to get rid of. Anyhow, it downloads stuff I don't want and I can't stop it, and when I want something I get bombarded with ads I cannot get rid of, as the computer does not respond to closing them down. Half the time it doesn't respond to the "shut down" on the menu and I have to resort to shutting off the power, which causes all kinds of problems when I want to start it up again. Ralph did do some work on it that helped it, but it didn't do enough to Gould 4, Kents Hill - 2; Sept. 29 — Gould won its first game of the season. The scoring opened in the first half with a goal from Miles Spadone from 25 yards on a direct free kick. The rest of the half was played in both ends of the field with both teams coming close, but not finishing. The second half was a different story. Gould controlled the game by spreading the field and keeping possession of the ball. They created numerous scoring opportunities and won the battle in midfield. Though Kents Hill scored twice on a counter attack and off a free kick, Gould was able to score three times. The second goal for Gould came from Miles Spadone pressuring a defender in his own corner, who played a blind pass to the top of the box. Ian Siekman intercepted the pass and played .a ball to Miles Martha, who calmly shot the ball in the back of the net as the Kents Hill keeper ran out toward him. The third Gould goal was created by a great delayed run by Art Weaver into the Kents Hill box. He was tripped, and Charles Parsons scored on the penalty kick. The last goal came from a free kick at about 30 yards out. Charles Parsons served a great ball to the far post, Ian Siekman out-jumped the goalkeeper to win the head ball. The ball was saved by Kents Hill on the goal line, but Miles Martha was there to head the ball into the back of the net to make the score 4-2.

Gould reunion weekend draws several hundred alumni, friends

By MIKE POPOVIC

A warm fall day set the stage for Gould Academy alumni returning to the Bethel campus for this year's Alumni Weekend. Past graduates from the 1930s to 2003 gathered to talk about the old days and experience the life of today's Gould Academy student.

Those attending were also in a generous mood — a big boost for the weekend's fundraising events.

Approximately 200 alumni (300 alumni and friends) came out for the weekend's events, including a large contingent from this year's 50th reunion class.

Alumni took advantage of maei (Class of 1940) was hontheir time on campus to visit classes and several sporting events. Those alumni not content to sit on the sidelines participated in the Eleventh Annual Frank Vogt Fun Run and Sunday's Golf Tournament.

At the Alumni Association's annual meeting, past graduates participated in a panel discussion with current students and faculty.

Topics ranged from the experience of a Gould Academy education to sports, performing arts and the Four Point Program.

Nathaniel True Bartholo-ored as Alumnus of the Year. Nat has served Gould for decades as a loyal class agent who has rallied his classmates both for annual fund gifts and five-year class reunions.

Thayer Hutchinson, Class of 1974, opened a small art show in Gehring Art Gallery. The show will run until Thanksgiving.

Thanks to generous alumni, weekend events such as the silent and live auctions raised more than $3,300 for the Alumni Association, doubling last year's total.

WHEN SELLERS SHOULD BEWARE

You contacted a Realtor to list your home, and the agent indicates that you might get more for your home than comparable homes on the market. After all, it just takes finding one person who is willing to pay your price - right? Some Realtors approach a listing appointment as if they are bidding for your home. Sellers often start out with an unrealistic opinion of their home's value, and there is often a strong temptation to go with a person who says what you want to hear, A good Realtor will back up their opinion of your home's value with hard data. The agent should give you information about homes that are currently on the market, and recent selling prices of similar properties. The most heroic marketing efforts won't work on a property that is overpriced. Even if you find a buyer who is willing to pay more than your home is worth, the sale could fall apart when the appraisal comes in lower than the agreed-upon price. Listen to everything, but be careful!

In Loving Memory of Richard Hutchins Murdered October 9, 1992

Friends may think we have forgotten when at times they see us smile. Little do they know, the heartaches that our smile hides all the while, Beautiful memories are wonderful things that last til the longest day they never wear out, they never get lost, and can never be given away. To some, you may be forgotten, to others, a part of the past. But to those who loved you and lost you, your memory will always last.
